Linc,

I will be traveling in Europe when you have the awards ceremony for Travis Trophy and Director's Trophy. I am sorry to miss that occasion. One enjoys not only the thrill of the winners, but it is a rather moving experience to listen to the accomplishments of those units that are really "belly to belly" with our intelligence problems.

My compliments to all nominees, winner or not.

Regards,

PRESENTATION OF AWARDS

Lt Gen Lincoln D. Faurer, USAF

The Travis Trophy was presented by Sir Edward Travis, K.C.M.G., to the U.S. Army Security Agency and the U.S. Naval Communications Supplementary Activity in 1945 as an award for competitive games. In 1964, it was designated by

Lieutenant General Gordon A. Blake, USAF,

Director, National Security Agency,

with the consent of Sir Clive Loehnis, K.C.M.G., as an annual award to the U.S. Cryptologic Agency which has made the most significant contribution in the fields of operations, management, administration, or suggestions.

The Director's Trophy was established in 1980 by

Vice Admiral B. R. Inman, USN,

Director, National Security Agency,

as an award to recognize the most significant contribution by a tactical support element.
